

The Eplin Family

Brad and Ashley Eplin began fostering with the goal of helping children, whether it was by providing physical needs, emotional needs, or a home to children in foster care. They value teamwork between themselves, and the children placed in their home, and also between caseworkers and biological families. Brad and Ashley’s dedication to communication allows biological families to maintain a relationship with their children and feel included in the fostering process. When asked how they cope with children who may return to their biological families, Ashley shared, “Today, I can give them safety, stability, and love. I can only control today, so if I can do that today for one kid, I have changed their day today.” The Eplins are excited to continue fostering by providing safety, stability, and love—one day and one child at a time.

Thank you for all that you do for the children and families in Summit County!
